To the Public. AM A CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION for Magistrate in the Fifth Civil District in And boding phanto
Shelby county; election, 4th of Angust, 1870.
This is not intended to appear any Democratic nomination, as mone have been made, so I am informed—the assumption of P. M. Winters to the contrary notwithstanding. I am with the Democracy, heart and hand (how is P. M. W.
Now on that question); but oppose pratto and neger in elections, as in all other things.
Had there been a convention of the people of my district, and nominations duly made, I should have cheerfully acquiesced in the will of the people expressed. Will the Democracy of Shelby sanction the secret action of a select few friends of any man; delegrates to a county convention, after its adjournment, and in secret as it were, by a chosen few, to nominate any one for any given district? We believe no such Faard will ever be indorsed by the voters of the Fifth Civil District. Such is not Democracy. Respectfully.

Sinews of White Men Drawn Out

THE PUBLIC LEDGER IS PUBLISHED overy afternoon (except Sunday) by Plains Cor. Cincinnati Gazette, 15th all.]

The Indian depredations continue along the border, and every day brings us a new horror, the mere recital of which makes the blood run cold. A few days ago three men, Dt. Bard, Harvey Morgan and a Mr. Mason, while on their way from South Pass City to Wind river, thirty-five milles distant, were attacked and killed by Arrapahoe and Sioux Indians. The party stopped over night in the camp of the Big Horn expedition, and early in the morning set out on their way to the valley. They had not spone far when a large party of Indians drove upon a knoll and gave fight. The struggle must have been a despectatione, and the unfortunate men, no doubt, sold their lives as dearly as possible. Under the wagon were found a large number of exploded shells of fixed animanifion that had been fired by the white men, and also two pools of blood, showing they had fought after being wounded. It is almost certain the men, after fighting for a time, cendeavored to escape, as evidences of the battle were found in two places. It is likely, after being wounded, they mounted the wagon and tried to cut their way out and reach the United States camp, on Little Poppoigte Creek, some twelve or fifteen miles distant. When found, the bodies were all stripped and horribly mutilated. The hind wheels of the wagon were detached from the fore part, and one end of the bed rested on the ground. The wagon had probably come uncoupled white the horses were running, and thrown the white men out. One of the fore wheels rested on the breast of Dr. Bard, where he had been put by the Indians and scalped alive.

This was my first encuenter with the dead.

We proceeded to the place, which I found no difficulty in pointing out.

Good heavens! what a sight met our view. The face and body had turned to a deep purple, and were swollen to three twelve or fifteen miles distant. When found, the bodies were all stripped and horribly mutilated. The hind wheels of the wagon were detached from the fore part, and one end of the bed rested on the ground. His writhing and struggles had torn up the sod, showing he had been held under the wheel some time before death ensued. Morgan lay near the wagon stark naked and scalped. The hammer of the wagon had been taken out, and the handle driven into his temple up to the shank, completely pinning the head to the ground. It could not be drawn out, so firmly was it imbedded in the skull bones, and it had to be buried with him. bones, and it had to be buried with him. His thighs and back were cut open, and

A lesson in itself sublime,
A lesson worth enshrining.
Is this: "I take no heed of time,
Save when the sun is shining."
These motto words a dial bore,
And wisdom never preaches
To human hearts a better lore
Than this short sentence teaches.
As life is sometimes bright and fair,
And sometimes dark and lonely;
Let us forget the toil and care,
And note the bright hours only. And note the bright hours only.

There is no grove on earth's broad chart. But has some bird to cheer it;
So hope sings on in every chart.
Although we may not hear it;
And if to-day the heavy wing.
Of sorrow is oppressing.
Perchance to-morrow's sun will bring.
The weary heart a blessing.
For life is sometimes bright and fair.
And sometimes dark and lonely.
Then let's forget the toil and care.
And note the bright hours only.

We bid the joyous moments haste.
And then forget the glitter;
We take the cup of life, and taste
No portion but the bitter;
But should we teach our hearts to doem.
Its sweetest drop the strongest;
And pleasant hours should ever seem.
To linger round us longest.
As life is sometimes bright and fair.
And sometimes dark and lonely.
Let us forget the toil and care.
And note the bright hours only.

The item so missed created a great amount of merriment, and at the expense of a number of Pemberton Square officials is told thusly: The raiders in their round of seizures had finally reached the establishment of "Tin Ford's," in Tremont street, near Scollay building, and in going through that saloon they seized, among other things, a full barrel of ale. A wagon was in waiting at the door to receive the plunder, and, as usual, a startled by a loud, strange, rattling sound issuing from beneath a low, thick bush, within a few feet of us. So constables Bayley and Daily, who are pretty good on their muscles, and who keep up the gentility of the Pemberton Square house by wearing good elothes, seized hold of the confiscated ale and undertook to boost it into the wagon. The Story of a Game of Cards Played by Bismarck, Count Nes-scirode and a French Consul. One hot afternoon in the month August, 1867, three men sat around August, 1867, three men sat around a table in a private parlor at the hotel Darmstadt at Ems, Germany, taking such comfort as they could derive from the juice of Rhenish grape and a pack of cards. The most conspicuous figure of the group was a large man with a bald head, grayish blue eyes, a heavy light-colored moustache, airs about him that would have done honce to the imprethat would have done honor to the imperial purple. This personage had even then achieved some fame and was tolerably well known to reading people by the name of Bismarck. Next to him sat another bald-headed individual infewere other indignities committed on their persons, which are too horrible to relate. As soon as the news reached the United States Camp, Colonel Bartlett sent out Lientenant Scott, with thirty infantrymen, in a wagon, who brought in the bodies and buried them at Poppoigie.

sat another bald-headed individual, inferior to Bismarck in stature, with a border of black hair about the base of his skull that looked like the rim of an old felt hat (ruthlessly robbed of its crown) condemned to remain there as a permanent figure. During the Crimean war the father of this man figured at the Cabinet councils in St. Petersburg as Saturday, the 27th of August, 1870, Count Nesselrode, but the son was only known as a clever gamester and an hab-itue of the fashionable European watering places. The third member of the party was a little fellow (so little that Marsh, who was hitched up with a bran new suit, and who was on the wagon superintending operations, got the benefit of one good "squirt" upon his natty vesture. And then the crowd shouted some more, and they kept shouting till the half-drowned "cops" at last got themselves together, and with an appearance much resembling that of a flock of wet hens, took themselves off. Arriving at the office, it was eighered out that three new saits were rained and a note made in the raid book, under the head of "remarks," that if the lady and child should ever call upon Major Jones, they would probably get paid for their rained dresses. They ought to call by all means.

I beheld a combat between a young man and a rattle-snake, in which the former was bitten and died in about ten minutes. The particulars of the terrible affair are as follows:

On Friday last a young man named Graynor asked me to spend the night with him, and go coon-hunting the next morning, to which request I readily assented. We started out about three oclock s.m., and near day the dogs opened on a trail in the swamp of Bear Creek. Just after sunrise the deep baying of the dogs informed us that the game had taken tree. We proceeded to take our way through the bogs and tangled brush vines in the direction of the dogs, until we came to a small space of firm ground which was covered with a low growth of oak bushes.
